

New Rocket Site commander takes over

submitted by the Propulsion Directorate

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Ohio — Colonel Michael W. Lamb was named as the new associate director for the Air Force Research Laboratory's Propulsion Directorate and its Edwards Research Site in August 2004.

In his prior assignment as squadron commander of the 66th Mission Support Squadron at Hanscom Air Force Base Mass., Colonel Lamb's team won the Air Force Materiel Command's (AFMC) "Outstanding Mission Support Squadron of the Year" award, as well as the "Best Family Support Center of the Year" award. Under Colonel Lamb's leadership, Hanscom was awarded an overall excellent rating, which was the first rating of this caliber given to an AFMC base in two years.

On Aug. 15, Colonel Lamb was introduced to Propulsion Directorate personnel at a commander's call, where he accepted responsibility for the directorate's mission to double the nation's rocket propulsion capabilities and its 65 square mile research facility. @